

Time Travel and Zombies: Geek Special

Hallo Freunde,

this year's August is the perfect month for me to finally invent a time machine.

Once I have the machine up and running, I will travel to another year's August and do the Edinburgh Fringe.

Then again: it was quite relaxing to not do the Fringe this year. No flyering, no running from gig to gig in the rain, no whisky hangovers, no being-pooped-on by chubby seagulls.

But what am I doing instead?

Much like a time traveler I am planning ahead: I'm writing 2015's show.

I am also gigging a lot and I'm designing a time machine. So I might actually be writing this to you from the future, or the past. Next time you talk to me over the phone, don't ask: where are you?

Instead ask: when are you?

(---Geek joke---)

Here's what's coming up:

On 28 August I am doing my solo show at the Lund Comedy Festival in Sweden.

The night before that, which is August 27th, I will be a guest on the festival's opening gala, broadcast live on Swedish TV.

If you have a Swedish TV, make sure you tune in. If you don't have a Swedish TV, go to your local IKEA and buy one now. Or steal one of those plastic TV sets they display in their showrooms.

I will be on those ones, too.

You can see me do stand-up on German television on 4 September (Nightwash, Einsfestival, 8:15pm). The recording was done the day after I got food poisoned after having some bad sushi.

So you can imagine how great I look on that show: like a zombie.

At least like that I will never again die on stage.

(---Geek joke---)

I will also be doing lots of live gigs in Britain, Germany and Europe over the next few weeks. So in case you don't have a Swedish or German TV set, come to a live gig and say hi.

One of the highlights will be the next edition of "Strictly Stand-up" in Berlin, where this time I (the host) will introduce Damian Clark, Isak Jansson and Bobby Mair. What a line-up! Set your time machine to 10-Sep-2014 and show up!

As usual you find my live dates here: www.germancomedian.com/tour.html

And you can buy a Swedish TV set here: www.ikea.com

See you around.

Danke und Prost!

Christian Ze German