

Are we humans, or are we charming dolphins?

Hallo Freunde,

as I am writing this (in my local cafe), somebody next to me is eating a bag of crisps. The loudest food in existence. So in order for you to hear me well, I will have to speak up: IS THIS BETTER? He's finished the crisps. So I can go back to regular writing noise levels.

It's a new year. And since it's been 19 days already, I won't bother talking about new year's resolutions. We're already back to our bad habits anyway. That's just human nature.

But we should embrace that. It's good to be human. It allows us to do so many exciting things.

Things you wouldn't be able to pull off, if you were an animal.

Imagine you were a dolphin. Yes, you'd be very likeable, you'd have great skin and you'd also be rather intelligent. But you wouldn't be able to do certain things; human things. Like read a book.

Or if you were a bulldog. You would be very strong, yes. But you would never be able to, let's say, win the World Cup. Because you're a dog. And...you're English.

(Okay, I promise that was the last time I'll ever mention the World Cup in a newsletter.)

Here are a few things that are happening next:

GERMAN TV

On Feb 27th the second season of the popular improv comedy show "Jetzt wird's schräg" will be broadcast on German television (Fridays, 10:15pm, Sat.1.). I will be on two of the episodes.

ENGLISH RADIO

BBC Radio 4 has just announced the broadcast dates for "Britain against the World", hosted by Ed Byrne. I will be on the episode on 12 March, 6:30pm.

LIVE GIGS

After a week of gigs in Germany, I will be back in London on February 1st, for several gigs including The Comedy Store on February 5th.

I will then do a little Scandinavia tour in Mid-February.

I hope to see you at one of the gigs. Or on TV...

As usual you find my live dates here: www.germancomedian.com/tour.html

Danke und Prost!
